DEER ISLE SKIPPERS

Meet On An Eastport Wharf For First Time In Many Years.

After a lapse of more than 30 years, two boyhood chums, both masters of yachts and natives of the famous breeding place for yachtsmen, Deer Isle, staged a reunion Wednesday noon on Wadsworth's Wharf, Eastport. The boyhood pals, Capt. Frank Torrey and Capt. Henry A. Carmon, left the little coast town of Deer Isle years ago to "go down to the sea in ships" and never glimpse of each other was had until their courses crossed Wednesday, the skippers coming ashore to look over the city while their craft lay at anchor off the waterfront.

It was Capt. Torrey, smartly clad in his uniform of gold trimmings, navy blue standing on the wharf awaiting the tender to take him back to the yacht, who was responsible for the reunion, his keen eyes glimpsing a familiar face in the passerby and in less time than it takes to tell the old pals fondly shaking hands and reminiscing of their boyhood days. Capt. Torrey, who has been master of some of the larger steam yachts owned in this country, is filling a temporary billet as Master of the Florida Houseboat "Letargo," owned by the New York capitalist, W. McMaster Mills, and flying the flag of the New York Yacht Club.

The "Letargo" is a comfortable looking craft, about 70 feet overall, and her 100 horse power motor drives her at a 10 knot speed. In the winter season she is used by the owner in Florida waters. She is on her way back to New York now from an eastern cruise with the owner and his wife aboard. Captain Carmon is master of the gasoline cruiser Topaz flying the flag of the Boston Yacht Club, owned by William H. Leland of Boston and Worcester who, with Mrs. Leland, is cruising in Maine waters. The Topaz is about 50 feet overall in length and has a cruising speed of about 10 knots.

HEADQUARTERS AT VINALHAVEN

National Officers of American Legion, Guests of Alton T. Roberts, Planning For the Paris Convention—Rumors Set At Rest.

The largest group of American Legion officials ever assembled, except at a national convention, is now being entertained at "Eastholm," Caldwell Neck, Vinalhaven, by Alton T. Roberts of Marquette, Mich., a member of the national committee in charge of the 1927 national convention to be held in Paris, France.

In the seclusion of Mr. Roberts' delightful summer home, and surrounded by evidences of his famed hospitality, the travel committee is formulating its plans for the big convention and wrestling with the formidable problems which naturally arise in the transportation of this peace army of 30,000 members, and its maintenance while on foreign shores. The delegation from the national headquarters in Indianapolis came into the State Thursday morning and was entertained at breakfast in Portland by the directors of the State Pier.

Waiting at the pier to greet the visitors were Col. Albert Greenleaf, chairman of the Maine committee, and Col. E. S. Antholme, former commander of the State department, City Manager Harry A. Brinkerhoff, Senator Hale, Mark L. Hersey of the Maine Associates, Henry F. Merrill, chairman, Fred K. Orem of the State pier directors, and others.

Brief speeches were made and the visitors then left for Brunswick where they were received with much enthusiasm by the delegates in attendance upon the State Convention of the American Legion.

The party then motored to Rockland, being met in Waldoboro by State Patrolman Ideal, who escorted the cars to Rockland, where the visitors embarked on the steamer Vinalhaven for their destination across the bay.

Heading the delegation from Indianapolis headquarters is the national commander, John R. McQuigg. The others in the party are James F. Barton, national adjutant; W. B. Williams, secretary to the national commander; Glenn D. Crawford, assistant to the national treasurer; J. C. Millsap, transportation expert; Robert M. Smith, general manager of the American Legion publication; Frederick C. Paine, director of publicity; John J. Wicker, Jr., travel director for the 1927 convention, and the following members of the travel committee: Bowman Elder of Indiana, chairman, Wade H. Phillips of North Carolina, D. W. Wall of Rhode Island, Samuel T. Reynolds of Nebraska, Gen. Albert A. Greenleaf of Maine and Albert T. Roberts of Michigan.

The busiest man in the party is the national publicity director, Mr. Paine, for it is his duty to tell the world the details about next year's wonderful convention and through the press furnish the prospective delegates with the desired information.

The France convention committee was yesterday gladdened by the receipt of important cablegrams from France, which set at rest all doubt which may have been engendered by the recent hostile demonstration as to the sort of welcome the ex-service men will receive across the sea.

The cablegrams were made public by Bowman Elder, national chairman of the France convention. The first read: "In response to your cablegram of a few days ago that from newspaper reports the French government and people are desirous to tell the Paris convention postponed, on account of the unsettled economic conditions and adverse public sentiment, in reply the 'Comite d'Entente' and the 'Seminale du Combattant,' the largest French Veterans organizations, and the two groups that organized the debt manifestations, have requested me to forward to you the following cable:

Comite d'Entente.
Seminale du Combattant.
Paris, France, Aug. 13.
"Representing more than 2,000,000 veterans and victims of the War, formally deny the rumors tending to create the impression that the people of France do not wish the convention of the American Legion to be held in Paris in 1927. On the contrary the French veterans rejoice to have this opportunity to show their American comrades that for their lasting comradeship and brotherly affection remains always above material considerations. We wish to assure that more than ever the members of the Legion will be received with sincere cordiality and great enthusiasm by their French comrades and the entire population. The recent incidents during the passage of foreigners have been isolated cases and insignificant. They do not reflect in any way public opinion, which remains loyally attached to the friendship of America."

Aristide Briand, French Minister of Foreign Affairs.
The second cablegram, also sent by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, was directed to Col. John R. McQuigg, national commander of the American Legion and reads: "Inasmuch as certain newspapers in America have circulated hostile rumors you have inquired of the French government what may be the attitude existing in France regarding the convention of the American Legion that has been invited to be held in Paris in 1927.

"The Comite d'Entente and Semaine du Combattant have informed you that members of the American Legion will be received with enthusiasm by their French comrades. You may be assured that for my part the coming to France of your members, graced as it is above all controversy and all political problems, will be considered as a sacred pilgrimage to the graves of the American soldiers who rest in France.

"There is not a Frenchman but who will greet your members as those graves. I can therefore only wish that as many members as possible of the American Legion will come in 1927, fully confident in the welcome that they will receive from the Government of France and the French people."

Bowman Elder declared that these cablegrams were made public to reassure American ex-service men that the plans for the France convention are going forward unimpededly because the American Legion believes that the visit of 30,000 ambassadors of good will to Paris next year will forever cement the bond of friendship between France and the American people and promote that idealism for which both fought on a common battlefield in 1917-18.

Any feeling in Paris over the proposed debt settlement with this country will not in any way impair, or be aggravated by, the 1927 American Legion convention in Paris, members of the France Convention Travel Committee declared.

"Our Legionnaires will be 30,000 ambassadors of good will," Chairman Bowman Elder of Indianapolis said. "The fact that a few irresponsible persons in Paris have taken advantage of the France's fall to vent their feeling on a few tourists will not affect our program. We have a cordial invitation from Ex-Premier Briand to come to Paris. The French Foreign Office has a special bureau which devotes itself entirely to ironing out the tremendous problems incident to moving, feeding and housing 30,000 men."

"The railroads of France have granted us a 50 per cent reduction in railroad fares as has Belgium. The hotel keepers of Paris are giving their heartiest cooperation. Nowhere, in fact, have we encountered anything but the greatest good-will and desire to aid us in this pilgrimage to France."

"There can be no doubt but that our visit to the graves of American soldiers buried in France, our trips to the battlefields where our blood and doughboy fought side by side for a common ideal, our visit to French shrines, will go far toward increasing that mutual feeling of good will that existed in 1917 and 1918."

Speaking of wars, Frederick C. Paine of Indianapolis said: "All twaddle that about the possibility of a war between the visiting Legionnaires and the Apaches of Paris. There is to be a guard of honor of 125 picked men, each of them about 6 feet 2 in height, and weighing 190 pounds, who will be assigned to the different State delegations."

"The date of the convention opening will probably be Sept. 17, 1927—a point to be definitely settled at the Philadelphia national convention this October.

"Our New England crowd will all embark from Boston. The other ports of embarkation are: Montreal, New York, Hampton Roads, Jacksonville, Charleston and Houston or Galveston, with New Orleans as a port of call.

THE CHARM OF CYRUS CURTIS

Famous Publisher Tells Rockland Rotarians How He Bought the Saturday Evening Post

Speaking before the Rockland Rotary Club yesterday noon Cyrus H. K. Curtis told again the story how he bought the Saturday Evening Post for $1000—a story which, if embellished with facts which he modestly refrained from giving constitutes perhaps the greatest romance to which modern journalism has given rise.

Today nearly if not quite 3,000,000 persons are subscribers to this great journal and it follows that whatever hook or corner of the country Mr. Curtis may visit he is importuned to tell the story. And he good naturedly assented.

To Dr. Walter M. Spear, president of the Rockland Rotary Club, would naturally have fallen the honor of introducing Mr. Curtis but he exercised his privilege of "passing the buck" and delegated that pleasant duty to W. O. Fuller.

Deploring that there are three professions which are distinctly marked out for recognition, which always seem to have the right of way, Mr. Fuller named the clergy, medicine and surgery and the newspaper profession, and said that the meeting was extraordinarily favored by having as its guest a distinguished gentleman—probably the only newspaper publisher in the world whose circle of subscribers numbers every person in any audience about to listen to him.

Mr. Curtis received a typical Rotary greeting and his story all too quickly told had the absorbed attention of every person in the room.

He prefaced his talk with a reference to a visit he had received the previous day from a representative of the Maine Publicity Association.

"There is no reason," said Mr. Curtis, "why we shouldn't push Maine forward as the summer playground of the United States. When I came to Camden to establish my summer residence 26 years ago I did not begin to know what attractions we had in my own State. My first surprise came when I made a journey up the Penobscot River. Everybody has heard about the Hudson River, but they don't know so much about the Penobscot, because it has not been so much advertised."

"And then what a wonderful season. I hope you will all consider that whatever publicity is given to Maine is helpful to every part of the State. Make your Knox County General Hospital an asset; put it right up to date."

"I spent last winter in the West, and I almost always winter to the South. Everywhere I go I find Maine people and I find them loyal to their native State. In Chandler, near Phoenix, Arizona, I noticed first that they had good roads; then I noticed that they had a magnificent school; then I saw another large building, and upon inquiry learned that it was an insane asylum. I didn't go in for fear I might have an experience similar to that of Lord Birkenhead in England. Lord Birkenhead concluded one day to visit one of the government institutions for the insane, and in doing so announced his official rank.

"I'm the Lord High Chancellor," said he.

"Good Lord," said the attendant, "we've got eight of them in here now."

Mr. Curtis then outlined the story of the Saturday Evening Post, which in two years will observe its 200th anniversary. It was founded by Benjamin Franklin and was known as the Pennsylvania Gazette until 1821 when the name was changed to Saturday Evening Post for the reason that there were six publications in Philadelphia bearing the name in which Gazette figured. The Pennsylvania Gazette had been published by Hall & Atkinson and the same owners continued in charge on the same day. In 1839 the magazine had 35,000 circulation, which was pretty good for those days.

Mr. Curtis knew the history of the Saturday Evening Post and he knew the value of its name for advertising purposes. He called with a view to investment and found that Mr. Smythe, the owner, had gone to Chicago to make his fortune, and after making it was coming back to Philadelphia to use the Post as a plaything.

But Mr. Smythe died and his sister was not minded to put further money into the publication. Eventually Mr. Curtis was approached by a Mr. Brady who had been editing the Saturday Evening Post, and saw in Mr. Curtis a possible purchaser, as the latter was the only owner who had manifested any particular interest in the paper. A purchase price of $2000 was named.

"I will give you $1000," said Mr. Curtis.

The offer was accepted, and the publication, which had faced extinction for lack of funds passed in 1897 into the ownership of the man who now counts his clientele in seven figures.

Mr. Curtis explained with a fine touch of humor some of the difficulties which beset his early connection with the Saturday Evening Post. He found that Mr. Smythe owed $8000 back rent, but was never quite able to figure how he had hypnotized the owner of the building. The editorial management had plunged him into a number of embarrassing difficulties, and causing about for a new man Mr. Curtis fixed his attention upon a former editor of the Cosmopolitan by the name of Hardy who was then minister to Persia. Mr. Hardy meantime had received promotion in the government service and Mr. Curtis placed George C. Lorimer in charge of the Saturday Evening Post, believing that there was better material in him than in the man he had had in view.

Mr. Lorimer at the age of 22 had been drawing down a salary of $5000 from Armour & Co. in Chicago, but had journalistic ambitions. One day he told Mr. Armour that he intended to study journalism, and Mr. Armour promptly and frankly told him that he was a fool.

"Maybe I am," said Mr. Lorimer, but in five years from now I will be earning twice the salary that the packing business is paying me."

Mr. Lorimer was putting on a front, but he was also making a prophecy which was to be fulfilled. He took a course in journalism at Colby College and followed this with two years' experience on the Boston Post. He then tried his hand as a free lance, and his writings attracted the attention of Mr. Curtis who put him in charge of the Saturday Evening Post. "In three weeks," said Mr. Curtis, "he had shown so much ability that I knew I had made no mistake."

Concluding this modest recital Mr. Curtis drifted naturally back to the "boost Maine" proposition and told of a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in Phoenix, Arizona where he heard the speakers brag of seven crops a year in the Salt River Valley. State pride rose up within him.

"Down in Maine," said he "we raise a fine crop. We raise men, and we raise some for export. The latter we pick before they are ripe."

And Mr. Curtis regaled his Western audience with a list of famous men and women who were either natives of Portland or had been identified with the State metropolis—Longfellow, Fessenden, Nathan Clifford, James G. Blaine, ex-Gov. Frank Black of New York, Admiral Robert E. Peary and Annie Louise Carey.

By way of benediction Mr. Curtis said something which pleased the Rotarians mightily.

"Use me in any way you can, even if in only an advisory capacity," were his words.

And his audience rose up and gave him an ovation.

Visiting Rotarians present, besides Mr. Curtis, an honorary member of the Portland club, were David E. Bailey, Woburn, Mass., H. N. McDougall, Portland, Willard H. Sprague, Cambridge, Mass., Herbert H. Healey, Grand Forks, Dak., Harry Jackson, Lebanon, N. H., Albert Robinson, Penobscot, Mass., Bill Stark and Lutch Stark, Orange, Texas; and guests were G. A. Lawrence, Rockland, C. A. Snow, Boston, Albert Glover, Charlotte, N. C., H. M. Spaulding, New York City, J. C. W. Leathers, Norfolk, Va., James L. Dorman, East Union.

CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT

Rockland, Maine, Aug. 14, 1926.
Personally appeared Frank S. Lydell, who on oath declares that he is pressman in the office of The Courier-Gazette, and that of the issue of this paper of Aug. 12, 1926 there was printed a total of 4330 copies.
Before me, FRANK B. MILLER, Notary Public.

Let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.—Isa. 1:18.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

The handsome parallelogram of sidewalk construction that has been completed about the Postoffice building measurably enhances the setting of that piece of public architecture which graces the business center of our city. The walks that have served for the past twenty years had gradually fallen into a state of disrepair that called for replacement. It is remembered by those having to do with the laying down of those earlier walks that their specifications had called for only a shallow foundation. It was pointed out at the time to the government inspector having the work in preparation that such shallow foundation was totally unsuited to withstanding the rigors of our Maine winters, but the Washington department had a way of deciding those matters for itself, and declaring that a foot in depth having served in other parts of New England, why not in Rockland, went ahead. The result predicted by our local contractors was not long in manifesting itself. Old Man Winter soon got in his work with his undermining frosts and in due process of time made it necessary to do the work all over again—this time with deep excavation suited to these latitudes and details in the mixture and laying of the concrete which should guarantee its permanency for all time. Our congratulations to the department, to the contractor who has so faithfully carried out the work, to Postmaster Blethen and his associates whose place of business is thereby the more beautified and to the public who share in the enjoyment of everything that tends to enhance the appearance of the community.

Should this have an appearance of extravagant recognition of the "building of a piece of sidewalk," let it be borne in mind that nothing is likely to be over-praised which bears reference to the embellishment of a city. Our public buildings are or should be an asset which the citizen may look upon with pride, discovering in them an inspiration to enduring with a note of beauty everything that relates to the community's material well-being. Some of Rockland's public buildings have contributed to this end, notably the Court House and the Postoffice, both marked by architectural dignity. In the connection we may be permitted a regret that the architect's department at Washington, when it became necessary through increased postal business to make an addition to the former building, should have been satisfied to attach to its eastern side a construction of wood which sorely weakens the impressiveness presented by the splendid granite structure. To the lay mind nothing but granite should have been brought into juxtaposition with those massive walls standing in the open square in the heart of the city. It is proper to mention in the connection that the use of granite was earnestly recommended by the postmaster, but the decision rested with Washington. We shall continue to look forward to a day when in the interest of architectural unity and structural grace the wooden annex to our Postoffice shall be brought into harmony with the dominating granite pile.

We suppose we should be both proud and happy in the knowledge that Miss Edérle has swam—or swum, we're always getting mixed with that verb—the English Channel, for she is an American girl and has triumphantly succeeded in a task that has spelled failure to many aspirants, some of them men of extraordinary physical development. If it seems necessary on a review of all the circumstances that the English Channel should be swam—or swum, whichever it is—it should be comforting to reflect that it is one of our own girls who swum it—or swam it, whichever to the reader seems the more satisfactory.

CONGRATULATED "HINDY"

President Coolidge in a message of congratulations to President Von Hindenburg of Germany on the seventh anniversary of the birth of the German republic, transmitted Wednesday, said:

"On this anniversary of the birth of the republic of Germany I extend to Your Excellency on behalf of the government of the United States and in my own name cordial congratulations and earnest wishes for the continued prosperity of Germany."

MAINE BEAUTIFUL

And the Important Part Camden Plays In Making It So.

Mrs. Elaine S. Viles, State chairman of Maine Beautiful, reports that the county chairmen have their respective counties well organized and that the city and town chairmen are doing excellent work. In places where there is a branch one cannot help but notice with pride that householders are endeavoring to make their homes and grounds more attractive to passers-by as well as to their families, all of which tends toward the making of good citizens.

Miss Theresa Aron, president of the Camden Garden Club, reports excellent work in her town. Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Bok offer as formerly the following awards:

Class I—First award, $100 for best-kept lawn, "Best-Kept" being interpreted to mean a well trimmed and well edged lawn. The entire front yard may be either all lawn or a lawn supplemented by a flower border or beds; second award, $50 for second best-kept lawn; third award, $25 for third best-kept lawn; fourth award, $25 for the fourth best-kept lawn.

Class II—First award, $100 for best flower garden; second award, $50; third award, $25; fourth award, $25.

The contestants must be all-year residents. Neither the lawns nor the gardens shall represent the work of a regularly paid gardener. They shall be under observation during the summer by a committee from the Camden Garden Club, and the awards presented at a public meeting in September. In addition to the award each successful contestant receives a framed certificate. The objects of the awards shall be, not only to cultivate a greater regard for and love of lawns and gardens, but to convey to Camden and passers-through the impression of well-kept homes. As one passes through Camden one notices baskets filled with flowering plants placed on posts at regular intervals. These are also the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Bok, and add greatly to the attractiveness of the streets.

The State Forestry Department has established many attractive wayside camps which are free to the public. They are equipped with fireplaces, tables and other conveniences and offer safe and comfortable camp sites.

Gov. Brewster has been much interested in the Association and has co-operated to the fullest extent, as the object of the Association is quite in accord with the Boom Maine Program in which he is most interested and active.

The attention of the chairmen throughout the State is called to the fact that Wild Flower lectures with colored lantern slides may be obtained from the Society for Preservation of Native New England Plants, Horticultural Hall, 300 Massachusetts avenue, Boston. The adult lecture lasts about one hour and has 100 slides; the intermediate, which is used much by high schools, lasts about three-quarters of an hour and has 75 slides; while the junior with 50 slides lasts about one-half hour. These lectures are free to schools, but a small fee is charged for club use.

THE EIG PARADE

The Mendoza-Axt music of "The Big Parade" coming to the Park on Aug. 27 is a feature of that remarkable super-picture directed by King Vidor and written by Laurence Stallings. All the resources of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer went into the production and among other things Major Edward Bowes of the Capitol Theatre, New York, arranged with David Mendoza and William Axt to write a score interpreting every character, mood and scene in the story. The music is filled with the famous French ditties and American songs of 1917-18 together with much original composition by Mr. Mendoza and Dr. Axt. Its rendition is one of the greatest musical treats of the season at the Astor Theatre, New York, where "The Big Parade" is now being shown, and in order to duplicate that metropolitan pleasure for local audiences a touring orchestra of twelve symphony musicians is carried by the organization on tour.

Miss Thelma Littlefield of Orono is acting as stenographer at the Eastern Steamship office during the summer rush.

Joseph Dondis, proprietor of Strand Theatre has bought the Guarantee Clothing Co. store at 360 Main street and will take possession about Sept. 15. Philip Rosenberg, the present owner plans to locate in another city.

Fire and water did big damage to the Western Union telegraph office in Bangor Monday night, much to the distress of Manager Joseph J. Flanagan, formerly of Rockland. The office had recently been improved at a cost of $100,000.

The steam roller held the center of the stage yesterday while ripping up the old tar road on Main street from Granite street up, preparatory to laying the new concrete road. There was a good gallery watching the interesting operation and they were not all kids. The remains of the old road will be dumped on the city's property at the foot of Talbot avenue, bringing it up to grade.

The issues of the State campaign will be discussed by three prominent Republican orators in the Arcade one week from tonight, the speakers being Hon. Ralph O. Brewster, governor of Maine; Hon. Wallace H. White, Jr., representative to Congress and Hon. Bert M. Fernald, United States Senator. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock and the general public is cordially invited.

Schooner Lavinia M. Snow, Strout, arrived at Sherborn, N. S., Aug. 11, to load lumber to Boston. Schooner William Bissbee, Merritt, discharging curbing stone at New Bedford from Sullivan, will sail Monday for Rockland, light, for overhauling. Schooner Helvetia, Pettigrew, was at Tarpaulin Cove, Aug. 9, with piling for New York from Apple River, N. S. Schooner Wawenock, Traynor, is at Weymouth loading lumber for Bridgport, Conn.

The Portland Eskimos of the New England League will again invade Togus tomorrow and try their luck in stopping the fast Togus semi-pro baseball club. Last Sunday with a record attendance these two teams were hindered from finishing their set by old Jupiter Pluvius and the fans desired to see a contest and the management of the home team has again secured the Eskimos for this Sunday. Portland has recently strengthened its lineup with several new players and Togus also has new faces especially picked to stop the Leaguers. Another record attendance is looked for next Sunday.

Colonel Evan A. Watkins, Chief of the Intelligence Department under General Allenby, during the World War, who participated in the capture of the sacred and historic city of Jerusalem, was in the city yesterday and after calling on several prominent citizens arrangements were made for the Colonel to lecture in the M. E. Church on Monday evening, Aug. 23. Colonel Watkins has lived for 27 years in the Bible Lands, and for 12 years in Jerusalem. During the War he saw the capture of Beersheba, Gaza, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Nazareth and Damascus. He was twice wounded in the fight in the Jordan Valley. He mentioned in dispatches for his work inside the enemies' lines and decorated with the grand cross of the order of Saint John of Jerusalem. His lecture here will be illustrated with 100 original views of the battlefields of the Christian era. He was accompanied on his visit here by Evangelist Lawrence Greenwood of Wisconsin Tabernacle fame.

Fuller-Cobb-Davis announce their Annual Sale of Fine Furs During July and August Rockland, Maine

The iron railing around the Post Office has been painted to keep pace with the new walk.

Capt. L. A. Crockett has been at Eastport this week adjusting compensation on eight boats belonging to the Seacoast Canning Co.

There will be service tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Ingraham Hill Chapel, Rev. W. S. Rounds will speak.

Everybody was so enthusiastic over Wednesday's races at Knox Trotting Park that there's talk of another big event on Labor Day. By all means.

Tickets for the Adelyn Bushnell play "Enter Madame" which will be presented at Watts hall, Thomaston, Aug. 19 with local talent, may be obtained from Miss Anne Hanley at the Rockland Motor Mart.

A hearing of the municipal officers was held yesterday afternoon relative to the extension of the Edward Bryant Co. wharf at the Northend a distance of 500 feet into Rockland Harbor. The situation was thoroughly canvassed and it is understood that the Council adjourned to await final drawings by the company.

An exhibition and sale of the work of Associated Hand Craft Industries of New York is on at the Copper Kettle today. The Associates are all disabled veterans of the World War and every cent realized from these sales is devoted to the welfare of disabled soldiers. The skill displayed by these crippled men in weaving, basketry, making of shawls etc., is little short of marvelous.

"ON MY SET"

I have experienced lots of good radio entertainment in the last six months, but nothing which could quite touch the exhibition given by WJZ Thursday night, and this in spite of the prevailing static. The program given during the Royal Typewriter hour and by the Fireside Boys, came in with splendid volume and every selection was a delight to hear. A novelty on the WPG program that night was when the director turned the microphone on the audience and fans might hear the mighty Atlantic ocean breaking against the steel pier.
 I called last night's reception very poor, except for WJZ, and was not a little surprised when he logged a new station, WADC of Akron, Ohio. For a short time it came in very well.

At the annual meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary, held this week in Brunswick, Mrs. Anne Snow, wife of Commander Charles F. Snow, was elected vice president. Mrs. Snow is the president of the local Auxiliary and has been an indefatigable worker for the cause. She returned home last night.

Through Robert U. Collins' real estate agency Misses Myra and Winifred Fitch have sold their house on Warren street to Clarence Dornan, who will use it for rental purposes. Mr. Collins has also sold the house on Pleasant street owned by Charles Moore of Augusta, to William Rogers, Jr., who will occupy it.

Attractions at the Strand next week are: Monday and Tuesday, "The Little Irish Girl" with Dolores Costello; Wednesday and Thursday, "Whispering Smith" with H. B. Warner; Friday, John Van Arnam's Minstrels; Saturday only, "The Pearl of Love" from the "Pearl of Orr's Island" by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Scenes of this picture were taken off the coast of Maine. Added attractions, "The Taxi Mystery" and a Harold Lloyd comedy.

It takes a lot to "git" Patrolman John T. Berry but he was "got" properly according to his own statement Wednesday. A motor car bearing the Massachusetts number plate 12,883, drew up in front of a Main street shop, "Tasty" and he, "it is odd that you should stop in front of Mayor Carver's store, for his number plate is 12,883 too." The stranger smiled and said "That isn't all of it either. Officer. Our names happen to be Carver also." Things were very quiet down around Park and Main streets thereafter.

The big carnival at Oakland is drawing to a close after a satisfactory run of two weeks. The Pine Tree State Amusement Co., which Manager Dondero brought in, has been a wholesome, enjoyable show, a credit to the park. The crowds have been excellent in spite of the consistently bad weather. The company carries eight novel rides and these will all be in operation Sunday, the closing day. The games will of course be in full swing tonight. This will be the grand closing show and Mardi Gras Carnival with free hats, serpentine and specials. A band concert will be in order.

THERE WERE MANY THRILLS

When Rockland Stopped the Onrushing Frenchies Last Night—A New Player Christened.

Next Week's Games
 Monday—Rockland at Camden.
 Tuesday—Camden at Rockland.
 Wednesday—Belfast at Camden.
 Thursday—Camden at Belfast.
 Friday—Belfast at Rockland.
 Saturday—Rockland at Belfast.

The League Standing
 Rockland again finds itself in undisputed possession of first place today, and in the game at Camden this afternoon will undertake to make amends for its poor showing there in recent weeks. This is how the percentages now read:

Team	Won	Lost	P. C.
Rockland	13	11	.542
Camden	11	12	.520
Belfast	11	14	.440

Belfast 9, Camden 3

The ease with which the Frenchies beat the Ladies at Belfast Thursday night served as another reminder that the Belfast team is likely to make a garrison finish in the Maine Coast League pennant race. Three new men faced the pitchers in this game—Cormier, who was playing left field for Belfast; and Kelley and Davis, who were playing second base and left field, respectively, for Camden. The newcomers acquitted themselves with credit, Cormier looking particularly good with the stick. It was early apparent that Carr, the Camden pitcher, would have his troubles, and the game had progressed no further than the third inning before Lanley Jordan began to warm up. He did not go in until the middle of the fifth, however, and fell heir to loaded bases. A wild heave by Curran allowed two scores. In the remaining innings Belfast scored but once off the spittball artist, but by Davenport and a single by Trainor.

Camden's solitary run was the product of a double by Nannigan and a single by Marr.

Running catches by Murphy, Daker and Davis featured this contest.

Any baseball fan who did not get his money's worth at Community Park last night must be very hard to please, for the game was filled with thrills from the moment it began until Umpire Albert called it in the eighth on account of darkness. Manager French made the tactical error of sending pitcher Moore against the Cannoneers for the second time this week, and the youngster met with a peppery reception in three of the eight innings. This evidently threw him off his stride for he also issued six passes. Another win was chalked up for Aube, who is now pitching consistently and effectively.

Kerville (which may or may not be the correct way to spell it) made his debut at third base and figured in a most dramatic play in the fourth inning, when Weston after catching McGowan's fly threw to third and shut off Cormier. It was a magnificent throw but high, and Kerville pulled it out of the air with one hand, touching his man within a few inches of the base. Kerville hit safely in two of his four times at bat, and brought in two much needed runs.

Weston was in fine form last night and delighted the crowd with three hits, all of which were productive of scores.

There were some dazzling plays around second and third with Cole, Reed, Small and Kiley showing real class.

Masiadi made two wonderful catches.

The score:

Team	ab	r	h	b	po	a
Small, ss	5	0	1	3	3	1
Kelly, 2b	5	0	1	2	3	1

Two-base hit, Paiment, Murphy, Cormier. Three-base hit, McGowan. Bases on balls, off Aube: 1, off Moore 5. Struck out by Aube 3, by Moore 1. Sacrifice hit, Reed, Murphy. Stolen bases, Cole, Reed. Double plays, Weston and Kerville. Passed ball, Widdiepie. Umpires, Albert and Thornton. Scorer, F. A. Winslow.

Neighboring Feelings

Again The Journal extends to The Courier-Gazette its sincere thanks in behalf of the Belfast fans and the Hudson-Essex team for the generous compliments which have been paid them. Belfast naturally is anxious to win the league pennant, as are the two other cities, but if the Texans come out at the top of the list there will be no rabbling or grumbling from this section. All we can say is—may the best team win. Rockland has a clean bunch of young men representing it this summer, men with reputations for fair play and a good sportsmanship won in the realms of college, school, and semi-pro ball. Weston, Masiadi, Aube, Rising, Feehan, not to mention the others, are boys whom it is a privilege to see in action. And Belfast fans appreciate it. They may howl gleefully when the mighty Bozo strikes out (a very rare occurrence), but they are willing to applaud loudly when the best college hitter of them all lambasts one to the suburbs for a triple or a home run, even if it spells disaster to Belfast.

If the Texans win the title honors, we will say "Congratulations!" And we know that we will be voicing the sincere sentiment of our own fans. But Manager French's outfit is going to make them know that they have had no walk-away. It will be a fight to a finish between the three teams of the league, but it will be a clean one—Belfast Journal.

George Kerville, who succeeds Brisk as third baseman of the Rockland team formerly covered third sack for Holy Cross. He has played semi-professional baseball on the Lisbon Falls and Twin Town teams in the Maine State League.

MINSTRELS COMING

Manager Dondis of the Strand Theatre wishes to announce to the public that he has secured John R. Van Arnam's Superior Minstrels for one night, Friday, Aug. 20. Van Arnam's Minstrels, while only on their fifth season comes with an enviable reputation of having played two consecutive years as a headline attraction over the B. F. Keith circuit of vaudeville theatres, being the only production giving the entire show on the Keith circuit. Mr. Van Arnam has the only minstrel show on the road today playing to popular prices of 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.00. He believes in crowded houses and pleasing the public. As with all minstrel shows there will be a street parade at noon and a band concert in front of the theatre before the night performance. Reserved seats are now on sale—adv.

Mr. Stuart will speak from the subject "The Third Dimension of Faith." Bible school meets at noon and regular evening service at 7.15. Pastor Stuart will preach from the topic, "The Art of Being a Christian." Mrs. Henry Ulmer will sing.

ATHERTON'S SYNDICATED STORES TO MAKE A SALE EVENT IN ROCKLAND

What is probably the largest chain of retail stores selling home furnishings is known as ATHERTON'S STORES. In 17 New England cities these beautiful stores have the reputation of selling the highest grade merchandise at the lowest possible prices, with a guarantee of service that has made the name ATHERTON'S a slogan that means to buyers a pledge that every article sold will be as represented.

This vast organization has buyers at every important market in the country searching for the best values, making large contracts at low prices and selecting the best styles and ideas for beautifying the home.

The Burpee Furniture Company of Rockland is one of the organization. Every advantage in buying is realized at the Burpee Store which is evidenced by the low prices throughout a tremendous stock.

For several months plans have been made for a big sale at the Burpee Store in Rockland. An event that will be different than the ordinary sale of hundreds of pieces of home furnishings bought at the recent New York and Grand Rapids markets will be placed on sale. Several factories will be represented by their new fall lines. A mark-down of every article in the store comes into effect at the same time and the most interesting and money saving sales ever held in Knox County.

The sale is to open Monday, August 23, at 9 a. m. The public is invited to inspect the store Saturday before the opening—adv.

THE PLAY IN THOMASTON

"Enter Madame" the comedy which Adelyn Bushnell is putting on in Thomaston next Thursday evening, for the Thomaston Public Library, was written by Gilda Varese and Dolly Byrne. With Miss Varese herself the leading part it scored one of the striking successes of a recent New York season with both critics and public, and this success was repeated later when Henrietta Crossman carried it to other cities. Although distinctly a comedy, full of surprises, unexpected turns, and amusing contrasts in the cleverly drawn characters (all of them good acting parts), the play also contains situations of dramatic strength and a good measure of "heart interest;" the spectators are surprised to find how fully his sympathies are enlisted for characters who at first have won him merely by their entertaining qualities.

When the curtain rises we find Gerald Fitzgerald, an American business man, thoroughly weary of his twenty years as the subordinate husband of a famous and temperamental prima donna. He has followed Madame Lisa Della Robbia's triumphal progress through all the capitals of Europe and America, carrying her hand luggage or her Pekinese, yielding to her whims, sacrificing his plans to hers; of late years he has stayed in America and hardly heard from her except in cablegrams. Now he is done. He has written frankly to Madame Della Robbia requesting her to divorce him. For his later years he wants a home, with a domestic wife who will cater to his tastes and comfort. In fact he has her all picked out—Mrs. Flora Preston, an agreeable widow of unblemished social position and soothing manners, who is quite ready to make up to him for all past unhappiness as soon as he is properly free. He explains the situation to his young son John, who, though up in arms for the mother, he adores without understanding her, can't deny that his father's present life is pretty unsatisfactory. Then the whirlwind strikes. Madame Della Robbia has received her husband's letter; she does not answer it—she comes. Preceded by her dog, her bird and her personal belongings, by her Italian maid, her chef, her doctor, and her secretary, "Enter Madame!"

MOTHER OF SEVEN CHILDREN

Helped in Caring for them by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Glasgow, Ky.—"I am the mother of seven children, the eldest being only 12 years, and I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped to pull me through the roughest places of my married life. At one time I was so downhearted that life was a misery. A friend in Indianapolis, Indiana, told me of the Vegetable Compound, and after taking a few bottles of it I became myself again and it was a pleasure to do my housework and gardening. Since then I always use your medicine when I feel weak from overwork and it straightens me out."

Mrs. MELISSA BARBERS, Route 2, care of O. F. Steenbergen, Glasgow, Ky.

New Orleans, La.—"I could not do a thing after my first boy was born. I was so weak, I had no appetite, lost weight and was not able to do my work. I was this way for seven weeks, then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got wonderful results from it."

Mrs. C. FAURIE, 4014 Dauphine St., New Orleans, La.

INTRODUCING The Improved Packard Six

TODAY'S Packard Six will outperform, in traffic and in speed, any Packard car ever built with one exception.

The exception is today's Packard Eight—The Boss of the Road.

The Packard Six has long excelled in beauty, in comfort and in distinction. In simplicity and in economy. Greater than ever in all of these, it now also excels in performance.

Those who drive the improved Packard Six will let others pass as a matter of courtesy, never of necessity.

In car beauty contest or contest on the open road it will more than hold its own against any Six, or any Eight, excepting cars of racing type.

Most useful and most appreciated of all, however, will be the car's agility and ease of control in crowded traffic.

For more than six years the Packard Six has been an inspiration to engineers.

It has been the most copied car in the world, mechanically and in body lines.

Now the industry has something new to inspire it—the most brilliant performance of any Six, or any Eight, light or heavy.

If you would know the finest in motor cars permit us to demonstrate the improved Packard Six.

We give you the word of one of the oldest and most conservative companies that you will experience the greatest thrill of your motoring life.

Despite the fact that the glory of all previous Packards has been surpassed, Packard Six prices have not been increased.

You are cordially invited to ride in and drive the improved Packard Six whether you intend to buy a new car or not.

We shall be more than repaid in seeing you get your thrill and in the story you will tell your friends.

Our next advertisement will tell of the improved Packard Eight—THE GREATEST CAR IN THE WORLD

THE REALM OF MUSIC

Gladys St. Clair Morgan

Ernest Custer, hailing from the Canton of Appenzel, Switzerland, has been giving a radio demonstration of yodeling over KGO, and whether or not Rockland audiences have heard this novel entertainment, Mr. Custer's explanation of the art, which appeared in a recent issue of the Sunday Boston Globe, is most interesting. He says that yodeling and singing have nothing in common—no person can be both a singer and a yodeler. Yodeling is difficult to master and is necessary to begin very early in life. Consequently the members of a Swiss herdsman's family yodel about something or other from morning until night.

Practically all yodels begin with a "yod-lee-oh-lay." More than 300 different yodels have been mastered by Mr. Custer. There are yodels for the cows, yodels for the girls, yodels for the hens and chickens, yodels for drinking parties, etc. When they yodel for girls, the "girl yodel" as it is called, is preceded by a whistled tune of a few bars. Following it is the yodel for a particular girl. The girl replies by yodeling a tone higher. This is kept up until the herdsman and his girl get together—then for the finale they yodel in unison.

When he is lonesome, mountain echoes are made use of by the yodeling herdsman. By waiting for the echo, sometimes two echoes, the yodeler is able to yodel a duet or a trio with himself. For this reason acoustic properties of mountains and valleys are known to herdsman, as well as the weather and feed conditions. Yodeling to cows, calling them in when storms threaten with landslides and floods, saves the Swiss herdsman many valuable cattle each year.

I am indebted to Miss Lorea Adams, a former Rockland girl, now located in Providence, R. I., for a very interesting article by Karl Kohrs in the Sunday Journal on scientific research as to the source of appeal in negro spirituals. Mr. Kohrs begins his article in this manner:

When the haunting negro ballad "Swing low, sweet chariot, Comin' for to carry me home,"

Pours out its incomparable melody from the throat of a group of dusky singers gathered in a shadowy circle of a fireplace in a Southern negro cabin, how much of the soul, how much of the personality, in short, how much of the emotions of the singers floats out upon the cadence of the song? When the devil-may-care chant of the negro "work songs" springs from the lips of burly section hands swinging picks under a shimmering Alabama sun, how much of their inherent and irrepressible exuberance does it express?

It is commonly known that, to the negro, his spirituals, his chants and his ballads are the flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone; that in them the tragedy of his race finds voice, and his whimsicality and satisfaction with his lot are all poignantly revealed. And now psychologists are attempting to find scientifically the measure of expression that those songs reveal.

This study, Mr. Kohrs goes on to explain, is being carried out by Dr. Milton Meffessel at the University of Iowa, and already the results are of absorbing interest. The experiment itself was suggested by Dean Carl E. Seashore, head of the psychology department at Iowa, and was begun in November, 1925, during which month both Dean Seashore and Dr. Meffessel made an extensive tour through Virginia and North Carolina.

Here among the native, true southern type of negroes, they found ample opportunity to get singers and songs first hand. They touched every stratum of negro life, from the tollers on the railroad tracks to the school children and church congregations. Negroes of all ages, from eight to seventy years, sang for the experimenters, and many trips were made to the public schools where records of school children were procured.

In his experiments Dr. Meffessel actually photographs the voices of the singers, a thing which has never been accomplished in anthropological research before. The phonograph record which has been used fails to yield a record of the delicate inflections and intonations which can be detected by no other means than actual photography. This takes the form of a curve on a film revealing every change in pitch and tone.

The vibrato or pulsations of the voice, which is so pronounced in many trained singers, is due to the influence of the motions on the muscles which operate the voice mechanism. One of Dr. Meffessel's studies is to determine the extent of these fluctuations of the singer's diaphragm, the changes in his voice and his emotions all by the action of light on a sensitive photographic film. The entire apparatus fits into an ordinary suitcase and can be carried easily from place to place. The voice strikes a sensitive diaphragm which vibrates a small mirror which reflects a beam of light from a tungsten bulb upon a film which is kept traveling by a certain point after the manner of a film strip in a movie camera. At the same time a hollow elastic belt fastened around the singer's waist directly over the diaphragm transmits the beating of his heart, and his breathing to another instrument called the phonoscope, which records its vibrations on the same movie film. A film meter measures the number of feet of film and records a time line which furnishes the means for calibration. While the record of the singer's voice is produced, a motion picture camera records his facial expression.

The most difficult problem the experimenters have run up against is getting the negroes to sing without constraint or restraint. However, when their natural reserve was broken into, they sang with vigor and enthusiasm. Work among the section hands proved to be perhaps the most interesting and amusing. This part of the work is described thus by Dr. Meffessel:

"We usually went where the men were working and after watching them for a time, asked them if they wanted their pictures taken. The response was always in the affirmative, and the men looked on with absorbed interest while the crank of the camera was turned. Then I asked them 'O do you ever sing while you work?' 'Oh, yes, cap'n,' came the answer, and at a request for a number, the entire gang broke into a spiritual dirge, or as they are called in the vernacular, work songs. We found that in every gang there was a leader who usually carried the solo parts and in general had the strongest voice. Taking him aside, we asked him to sing alone before the recording machine and thus got individual records."

They keep an almost perfect rhythm to the songs with their picks and other tools. "The words to the songs are usually meaningless, used merely as an excuse, as it were, for the melody. Here is one:

"I got a muley.
Muley in a mountain called Jerry.
I can ride him any time I want to,
Lawd, Lawd, any time I want to."

The last word in every line is followed by a short guttural "huh," emphasized by the down-stroke of the pick-axe, thus:

"I got a muley—huh!
Muley in a mountain called Jerry—huh!"

Among the songs sung by the section hands were often found many of the classic spirituals which they sang with the greatest vigor and fervor, accompanying them with violent bodily motions.

The work among the school children led to a striking discovery. The youthful generation refuses to sing the old spirituals, believing them to be old-fashioned and out of date. They like the regulation popular jazz ballads, but into which they inculcate more than ordinary melodic beauty and harmony. They are fond of singing "Blues," these are usually accompanied by dancing and jiggling.

The older church members still cling to their spirituals which are literally their religion. Many of the old spirituals were born in religious meetings. Some members of the congregation became inspired by a thought expressed by the minister. Immediately he began singing the words to a tune of his own composition, the congregation joining in heartily on the chorus. In this way melodies of indescribable elusive beauty, as "Deep River" and "Go Down Moses" sprang into life. The latter is really typical of the camp-meeting type of spiritual.

There are several definite types of songs common to the negro repertory. These include the blues, social songs, "boze" or "anties," and the spiritual which is divided into two classes, the formal and the prayer meeting. Diversified in character as they are, there runs through them all that strange minor cadence which distinguishes negro music from any other music in the world.

The Courier-Gazette's contributor "Boze" writes to this department in connection with this discussed topic: "Frequently on the radio we get the so-called Negro Spirituals. I wonder how long that phrase has been in vogue? In my boyhood days we used to have the Fiske Jubilee Singers, real honest to goodness negroes, sing for us, but I am of the opinion that the most of the spirituals we hear on the air are sung by white folk. I find this entry in Dad's diary for 1878:

"June 24—Attended Jubilee Concert, Norfolk Negroes, originally slaves." I was there and remember it well. Especially the bass with a mouth that opened like a cavern when he sang a "spiritual." "Now Moses, don't touch it!"

I learn that Miss Adelaide Cross is to enter the New England Conservatory of Music this fall. This bit of news makes me happy, as I have felt for some time that her talent should win her a more distinctive place in music. While I have not talked with her, I understand her attention is to be turned principally to instruction in teaching, which is a wide subject in itself.

Such fine things have come to my ears about the singing of Mrs. Dorothy Bird George at the Baptist Church, last Sunday. Mrs. George always possessed a contralto voice of beautiful quality, and sang with understanding. But now, I am told, her voice has acquired the most enchanting smoothness and richness, and that she imbues her songs with style and expression far ahead of past days. One of the numbers she sang Sunday was "My Task." Ashcroft, a song familiar to and loved by many. She sang it splendidly.

Symphonic

PHONOGRAPH REPRODUCER

It is difficult to realize that this small unit, barely 2½ inches in diameter, can actually revolutionize the old type phonograph, and enable it to bring out almost unbelievable reproduction results.

With it, your old type phonograph will reproduce the new electrical records with absolute fidelity, with resonant, strong volume and beautiful clarity, bringing out every detail and sound put into the original recording including the bass and high tones. The Symphonic Reproducer plays all records with a delightful sprightliness and verve, embracing the entire musical register, the entire chromatic scale, with a reproduction of color tones that will impart a new and distinguished character and richness to your old phonograph, no matter what make.

The Symphonic Reproducer

is a marvel of scientific construction. Rightly built and obtainable in either gold or nickel finish, it is a beautiful and permanent addition to the finest, most costly phonograph. The diaphragm is made of specially treated and tempered metal, graduated to the proper thickness, determined by exhaustive experiments to yield finest results.

Mrs. Ogarta Rose Rugg is in the city for her annual visit. I am hoping we will have opportunity to hear her sing in public before she returns home. Mrs. Rugg is a very interesting singer, both in voice and style, and her programs always contain novel and unusual numbers which make her a very satisfactory recital artist.

I note from the Portland Sunday Telegram that Miss Clarice Merriam Smith and Miss Zippaetta Butterfield, prominent musicians in Portland, have been taking a six weeks' course at the summer school at Chautauque, N. Y. Both these artists appeared on the program given in conjunction with the State Federation above mentioned. Miss Smith is one of the most talented pianists I have ever heard, and I am told she is a very successful teacher.

I lately had a long chat with Miss Esther Stevenson. Our talk naturally turned to music, especially public school music, and after listening to Miss Stevenson I can well understand her success in this line. She loves her work and is devoting every effort toward accomplishment in her position. She is to return to Westbrook for another year, her re-election being unanimous. In addition to the regular work in the Westbrook schools (I believe she visits forty or more grades each week) she has three orchestras, special choruses, vocal quartets, instrumental combinations, etc. Her work among the French boys and girls in the eighth grades she finds especially absorbing. In her own words: "They do not learn music so readily perhaps, but when they do, how they can sing!"

Miss Stevenson has affiliated herself with the Chopin Club of Westbrook, a cross, as she expressed it, between the Harmony Club and the Rubinstein Club, the members from 18 to 35 years. The club meets every two weeks at the homes of the members; a business meeting is followed by a program, refreshments are served and a social hour enjoyed. The club sent an instrumental trio to the State Federation of Music Clubs in Lewiston-Auburn last April, and their work made a very favorable impression.

THE BANGOR FAIR

Perhaps never has Bangor Fair, which comes on Aug. 23-28,—with only a few days more to wait—been on quite so varied, elaborate and expensive a scale. Just as no patron of the Bangor and Ringling Circus can see all of the marvelous panorama unfolded before him in five rings and four elevated stages, so no patron of Bangor Fair can see all of the offerings at Bang Park in one day, though he goes early in the morning and stays until late at night. There will be track events for purses of $84,000, with the fastest and best-known entries in the New England Tri-State Circuit; a glorified vaudeville show; the finest cattle in the East; auto races by professionals out to establish a speed record, for the purse makes it worth while; and, at night, with all the illuminated shows added, and at good, old-fashioned prices as in effect before the war—adults, 50 cents; children, 25 cents, in the daytime; a uniform charge of 25 cents at night. It is believed that never before have the people of Eastern Maine been offered quite so great a bargain in pleasure—adv.

THE OUTDOOR CODE

Help save trees and wild flowers. Protect the birds and game. Keep the highways beautiful. Pick up the picnic rubbish. Put out your fire; then bury it.

The world's growing conviction that future wars will be decided in the air is no reason for leaving peace there.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.
